

Official Time: EEO Cases

Overview

A complainant who is an employee of an agency shall have a reasonable amount of official time, if otherwise on duty, to prepare an EEO complaint and to respond to agency and EEOC requests for information. If the complainant has designated another agency employee as a representative, that employee shall have a reasonable amount of official time, if otherwise on duty, to prepare the complaint and respond to agency and EEOC requests for information. 29 CFR 1614.605\(b\).

This Quick Start Guide covers the following Key Points:

1. In general
2. Liability doesn't depend on motive
3. Requests for official time
4. Defining a reasonable amount of time
5. EEOC: A reasonable amount of official time
6. Agreeing on a reasonable amount of time
7. Denying official time
8. Scheduling issues
9. Official time to represent another employee
10. Official time to represent non-employees
11. Official time for travel
12. Remedies
13. Limiting official time based on system abuse
14. Standing to raise official time claims
15. Reprisal

Key Points

These key-point summaries cannot reflect every fact or point of law contained within a source document. For the full text, follow the link to the cit source. The references to Hadley in this Quick Start Guide are to federal employment law expert Ernest Hadley's treatise, A Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice (Dewey Publishing, Inc.), to which cyberFEDS® has exclusive Web rights.

In general

- Hadley: Employees are not required to prevail on their discrimination claims in order to receive official time. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Use of Official Time.
- Hadley: In complaints alleging the denial of official time, the only issue is whether there is a violation of 29 CFR 1614.605 \(b\). The complainant is not required to prove that the denial of official time is discriminatory. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Use of Official Time.
- The complainant stated a viable claim when he asserted that he was denied administrative leave to prepare for an EEO hearing. The agency improperly dismissed the complaint for failure to state a claim. Mitchell v. Department of the Air Force, 106 LRP 5681 (EEOC No. 01A53577 (EEOC OFO 2005)).
- Hadley: Participating in EEO hearings constitutes protected activity and the denial of official time to participate will be considered to be interference with the EEO process. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Denial of Official Time.

Liability doesn't depend on motive

- In assessing a denial of official time claim, the focus is not on the agency's motive, but rather on whether the complainant was denied a reasonable amount of official time. Caterro v. U.S. Postal Service, 111 LRP 56764, EEOC No. 0120093802 (EEOC OFO 2011).
- An "allegation pertaining to the denial of official time states a separately processable claim alleging a violation of the Commission's regulations, without requiring a determination of whether the action was motivated by discrimination." King v. U.S. Postal Service, 108 LRP 29045, EEOC No. 0120080823 (EEOC OFO 2008).
- Because the EEOC may remedy violations of 29 CFR 1614.605 absent a finding of discrimination, it focuses on the justification for the denial of official time rather than on the motivation. Szluzer v. U.S. Postal Service, 107 LRP 59379, EEOC No. 0120072747 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- Because complainants are entitled to a reasonable amount of official time for processing their EEO complaints under EEOC regulation, 29 CFR 1614.605 \(b\), when the time is improperly denied, it is not relevant whether the agency was motivated by reprisal against the complainant for prior EEO activity or by any other improper motive. Lambert v. Social Security Administration, 100 FEOR 3107, EEOC No. 05990820 (EEOC 1999).

Requests for official time

- Hadley: Complainants cannot simply take official time without first asking for it and having it approved. Agencies must establish procedure for making requests and inform complainants about the procedures. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Official Time Requests and Denials.
- On appeal, the complainant alleged that the agency denied her official time to meet with her attorney. However, because there was no evidence she requested official time to meet with her attorney to work on EEO matters, the EEOC found no violation. Jarrell v. U.S. Postal Service, 113 LRP 5883, EEOC No. 0120090443 (EEOC OFO 2013).

Defining a reasonable amount of time

- "'Reasonable' is defined as whatever is appropriate, under the particular circumstances of the complaint, in order to allow a complete presentation of the relevant information associated with the complaint and to respond to agency requests for information." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "The actual number of hours to which complainant and his/her representative are entitled will vary, depending on the nature and complexity of the complaint and considering the mission of the agency and the agency's need to have its employees available to perform their normal duties on a regular basis." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- Time spent in complaint-related meetings with agency officials and administrative hearings is automatically deemed reasonable as official time. EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- A reasonable amount of official time can be requested to prepare for EEO meetings and hearings, as well as to prepare formal EEO complaints and appeals even though no meetings or hearings are involved. EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- However, because investigations are conducted by agency or Commission personnel, the regulation does not envision large amounts of official time for preparation purposes. Consequently 'reasonable,' with respect to preparation time (as opposed to time actually spent in meetings and hearings), is generally defined in terms of hours, not in terms of days, weeks, or months." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "The Commission considers it reasonable for agencies to expect their employees to spend most of their time doing the work for which they are employed. Therefore, an agency may restrict the overall hours of official time afforded to a representative, for both preparation purposes and for attendance at meetings and hearings, to a certain percentage of that representative's duty hours in any given month, quarter, or year." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "Such overall restrictions would depend on the nature of the position occupied by the representative, the relationship of that position to the mission of the agency, and the degree of hardship imposed on the mission of the agency by the representative's absence from his/her normal duties." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "The amount of official time to be afforded to an employee for representational activities will vary with the circumstances." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- Hadley: The amount of official time that is reasonable for each situation must be considered on a case-by-case basis. Restricting the number of hours of official time for presenting an EEO complaint, without considering the complexity of the complaint, is inconsistent with regulations and improper. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Official Time Policies, citing Kooiker v. Department of the Navy, 87 FEOR 24524, EEOC No. 01862753 (EEOC 1987).
- Hadley: Time spent at meetings, such as prehearing conferences, and the EEO hearing itself is deemed to be within the reasonable amount of official time for a complainant and his representative. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: EEO Meetings, citing Zuniga v. U.S. Postal Service, 83 FEOR 21338, EEOC No. 01831980 (EEOC 1983).
- Hadley: An employee is entitled to a reasonable amount of time to consult with his or her representative, but is not necessarily entitled to meet personally with the representative. An agency may restrict official time to telephone contact with the representative if the circumstances warrant. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Consultations With Representative.

EEOC: A reasonable amount of official time

- The EEOC found that the agency afforded the complainant reasonable amounts of official time. Management explained that for a long time it did not track the amount of official time the complainant used. On one occasion, management stated that the facility was short-staffed, so he could not be granted a lot of time on that day, but he was granted more official time the next day. Management pointed out that the complainant was granted official time almost daily. The EEOC explained that it is reasonable for agencies to expect their employees to spend most of their time doing the work for which they are employed. Michael V. v. Department of Defense, 119 LRP 32164, EEOC No. 0120181500 (EEOC OFO 2019).
- The EEOC found that the agency afforded the complainant reasonable amounts of official time to work on her EEO complaints. The agency granted her 22 hours of official time during a two-month period. The EEOC said that it considered it reasonable for an agency to expect that employees to spend most of their time doing the work for which they are employed. Fonda M. v. Department of the Treasury Internal Revenue Service, 117 LRP 45188, EEOC No. 0120152809 (EEOC OFO 2017).
- The EEOC found that 3 1/2 working days of official time was a reasonable amount of time for the complainant to work on her case. Jessica E. v. Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Marketing Service, 116 LRP 3423, EEOC No. 0120132357 (EEOC OFO 2016).

- The complainant alleged that she was told an internal agency policy placed a 15-hour cap on the amount of official time that could be used for work on EEO complaints. The EEOC advised the agency that all requests for official time should be considered on a case-by-case basis. Further, the complainant should have been granted more than 15 hours of official time because her case was complex, involved a hearing request, and also required extensive discovery. Tammy S. v. Department of Defense, Defense Intelligence Agency, 114 LRP 27554, EEOC No. 0120084008 (EEOC 2014).
- The complainant asked for four hours of official time to prepare an appeal from the agency's dismissal of his complaint, but was granted only one hour. The EEOC found no violation of 29 CFR 1614.605 (b) because he failed to provide any additional information to show that the time he needed was beyond the amount granted. Complainant v. U.S. Postal Service, 0120123527, 113 LRP 9409 (EEOC OFO 2013).
- The EEOC found that the agency reasonably granted the complainant two hours of official time to prepare for a meeting with an EEO investigator. Although she argued that the time was insufficient and would interfere with her lunch, the EEOC pointed out that she made the request at the last minute and that she had FOIA reports that she was required to complete in a timely manner. Reeves v. Department of Health and Human Services, 112 LRP 23869, EEOC No. 0120102661 (EEOC OFO 2012).
- The complainant failed to show that he needed more than two hours of official time to work on his EEO complaint. Manning v. Department of Veterans Affairs, 111 LRP 13983, EEOC No. 0120081116 (EEOC OFO 2011).
- The agency appropriately granted the complainant two hours of official time to work on her EEO complaint rather than the eight hours she requested. Her supervisor legitimately asked why she needed eight hours, and she refused to provide the information necessary to support her request. Shaw v. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, 107 LRP 59561, EEOC No. 0120072091 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- The agency granted the complainant eight hours of official time to gather evidence in support of his claim for compensatory damages. He failed to show why he needed the 120 hours of official time he requested. McCartin v. U.S. Postal Service, 106 LRP 114, EEOC No. 01A50285 (EEOC OFO 2006).
- The complainant was not entitled to the approximately 80 hours of official time he requested to work on his complaint, but was appropriately granted eight or 16 hours. Shjeflo v. Department of Agriculture, 106 LRP 11168, EEOC No. 01A55789 (EEOC OFO 2006).
- "[A] complainant's right to official time [for pursuing EEO complaints] is not an unqualified right. It is restrained by legitimate management considerations, like business necessity.... Thus, what constitutes a reasonable amount of official time must be determined by weighing two factors: the amount of time necessary to process the complaint given the complexity of the complaint; and, the complainant's job responsibilities and the agency's need to utilize the complainant in his job functions." Hall v. Department of the Army, 85 FEOR 20174, EEOC No. 01842335 (EEOC 1985).
- Noting un rebutted testimony that the complainant was spending more time on her EEO complaints than her work, the EEOC found the agency permissibly imposed a two hour per week limit on official time the complainant could use for pursuing her EEO complaints. The agency did not limit the complainant's time for EEO-related meetings. Matuszeski v. Department of the Treasury, 98 FEOR 10809, EEOC No. 01956479 (EEOC OFO 1997).
- Sixteen hours of official time to prepare for an EEO hearing was reasonable under the circumstances of the complainant's case. Segura v. U.S. Postal Service, 86 FEOR 20167, EEOC No. 01841339 (EEOC 1986).

Agreeing on a reasonable amount of time

- "The complainant and the agency should arrive at a mutual understanding as to the amount of official time to be used prior to the complainant's use of such time." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "The agency must establish a process for deciding how much official time it will provide a complainant. Agencies further must inform complainants, their representatives, and others who may need official time, such as witnesses, of the process and how to claim or request official time." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- An agency may restrict hours of official time to a percentage of a representative's duty hours in a specific period of time. The agency appropriately limited the complainant to 10 hours of official time per week for his representational activities. Szluzer v. U.S. Postal Service, 107 LRP 59379, EEOC No. 0120072747 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- Although a complainant is entitled to a reasonable amount of official time to pursue EEO matters, he is not entitled to disregard an agreed action plan that is aimed at providing time for EEO matters, but that also meets deadlines for the completion of work assignments. Ng v. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, 111 LRP 40834, EEOC No. 0120100965 (EEOC OFO 2011).

Denying official time

- The agency legitimately explained that it placed the complainant on unauthorized leave without pay rather than official time for two hours because he could not account for his time after an ADR meeting at the EEO office had ended. Cole E. v. Department of the Navy, 124 LRP 5617, EEOC No. 2023001334 (EEOC OFO 2024).
- A mission support specialist vehicle officer for Customs and Border Protection was not improperly denied official time. Her request for official time to meet with an EEO counselor was approved. However, her request for 20.5 hours was properly denied because she did not obtain prior approval consistent with official policy and she did not establish that she was in a duty status for the hours requested. Josephine

S. v. Department of Homeland Security, Customs and Border Protection, 118 LRP 28839, EEOC No. 0120161196 (EEOC OFO 2018).

- The agency did not violate EEOC regulations when it denied the complainant's request for official time because the request was not in writing and was made before he sought EEO counseling. Saez v. Department of Agriculture, 107 LRP 63563, EEOC No. 0120061687 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- "If the agency denies a request for official time, either in whole or in part, the agency must include a written statement in the complaint file noting the reasons for the denial. If the agency's denial of official time is made before the complaint is filed, the agency shall provide the complainant with a written explanation for the denial, which it will include in the complaint file if the complainant's subsequently files a complaint." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "Where a request for official time is denied in whole or part while an Administrative Judge is presiding over the matter, a copy of the agency denial of official time with the requisite explanation should be provided to the Administrative Judge when provided to the requestor." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- The agency improperly denied a meat cutter's request for official time to work on his EEO complaint. The EEOC found the record contained a "scrawled" handwritten note stating that the meat cutter was denied official time because the meat case was not filed. The agency did not indicate why he could not have been granted official time after the meat case was filed, perhaps on a different date. Therefore, the EEOC found the agency did not meet its burden of addressing the request. Dillard v. Department of Defense, Defense Commissary Agency, 112 LRP 11745, EEOC No. 0120113984 (EEOC OFO 2012).
- The agency's inadequate explanation for changing the complainant's official time allotment from 2.5 hours to 15 minutes led the EEOC to decide that the complainant was not allowed a reasonable amount of official time to work on her EEO complaint. Maddox v. U.S. Postal Service, 111 LRP 16944, EEOC No. 0120081760 (EEOC OFO 2011).
- The agency improperly denied a mail handler official time to prepare her EEO complaint. She requested 16 hours to work on complaint but her supervisor immediately denied her request without explanation. Tokur v. U.S. Postal Service, 110 LRP 43103, EEOC No. 0120090575 (EEOC OFO 2010).
- Hadley: A complainant must provide adequate justification for an official time request. In Shaw v. Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., 107 LRP 59561, EEOC No. 0120072091 (EEOC OFO 2007), the complainant requested eight hours of official time to prepare her formal complaint, but she refused to specifically explain why she needed that time, so the agency appropriately granted her two hours. Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Official Time Requests and Denials.

Scheduling issues

- "The complainant and representative, if employed by the agency and otherwise in a pay status, shall be on official time, regardless of their tour of duty, when their presence is authorized or required by the agency or the Commission during the investigation, informal adjustment, hearing on the complaint." 29 CFR 1614.605\(b\).
- "Most of the time spent by complainants and their representatives during the processing of a typical complaint is spent in meetings and hearings with agency officials or with the Commission Administrative Judges. Whatever time is spent in such meetings and hearings is automatically deemed reasonable. Both the complainant and the representative are to be granted official time for the duration of such meetings or hearings and are in a duty status regardless of their tour of duty. If a complainant or representative has already worked a full week and must attend a hearing or meeting on an off day, that complainant or representative is entitled to official time, which may require that the agency pay overtime." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- It is expected that the agency will, to the extent practical, schedule meetings during the complainant's normal working hours and that agency officials shall provide official time for complainants and representatives to attend such meetings and hearings." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- "If meetings, conferences, and hearings are scheduled outside of the complainant's or the representative's normal work hours, agencies should adjust or rearrange the complainant's or representative's work schedule to coincide with such meetings or hearings, or grant compensatory time or official time to allow an approximately equivalent time off during normal hours of work." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- It is not unreasonable for a complainant to request that EEO meetings be scheduled while he is "on the clock." Zuniga v. U.S. Postal Service, 83 FEOR 21338, EEOC No. 01831980 (EEOC 1983).
- A complainant who was not allowed to change his schedule so he could attend an EEO hearing in pay status was entitled to overtime pay because he had already worked a full workweek. Edwards v. U.S. Postal Service, 97 FEOR 3039, EEOC No. 059507C (EEOC 1996).
- "Witnesses who are federal employees, regardless of whether they are employed by the respondent agency or some other federal agency, shall be in a duty status when their presence is authorized or required by the Commission or agency officials in connection with the complaint." 29 CFR 1614.605\(f\); EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.
- The agency did not discriminate against the complainant when it refused to change his schedule to facilitate work on his EEO complaint. It was not denied official time because he was not otherwise on duty, and his regular shift allowed sufficient time to prepare a rebuttal statement. Saez v. Department of Homeland Security, 107 LRP 63506, EEOC No. 0120060433 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- An agency is not required to change work schedules, pay overtime wages, or pay travel expenses to facilitate the choice of a specific representative or to allow a complainant and representative to confer. 29 CFR 1614.605\(b\).

- The petitioner was appropriately denied 3.5 hours of official time for two meetings with his attorneys concerning EEO matters because the meetings occurred outside his regular duty hours. Further, the petitioner was not entitled to any official time for prosecuting administrative EEO claims after he was removed because he was no longer employed by the agency. Godbout v. Department of Agriculture, 101 FEOR 3006, EEOC No. 03990058 (EEOC 2000).

Official time to represent another employee

- An agency employee is entitled to official time to represent another employee in nonpay status as long as the employee was an employee the time of the alleged adverse action. Kwok v. U.S. Postal Service, 95 FEOR 3102, EEOC No. 05940368 (EEOC 1994).
- The agency subjected the complainant to reprisal when it issued him a letter of reprimand for meeting with an EEO client while on official time. The agency had never defined for the complainant what was meant by "official time," and the complainant met with the client while on scheduled break. Haskins v. Department of Defense, 101 FEOR 1198, EEOC No. 01A05396 (EEOC OFO 2001).

Official time to represent non-employees

- An agency employee is not entitled to official time in connection with the representation of a complainant who is not an agency employee. Skinner v. U.S. Postal Service, 87 FEOR 23674, EEOC No. 01870477 (EEOC 1987).
- "The Commission does not require agencies to provide official time to employee representatives who are representing complainants in cases against other federal agencies. However, the Commission encourages agencies to provide such official time." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.

Official time for travel

- An agency must grant employees reasonable official time to travel to EEO meetings. Saunders v. U.S. Postal Service, 86 FEOR 3300, EEOC No. 01850205 (EEOC 1986). What is reasonable depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Saunders v. U.S. Postal Service, 86 FEOR 22625, EEOC No. 05860155 (EEOC 1986).
- Under the circumstances, the agency reasonably denied the complainant's request to travel to another facility to meet with his representative. He was allowed 40 minutes of official time to speak to his representative over the phone. Lewis v. U.S. Postal Service, 101 FEOR 1260, EEOC Nos. 01A00484, 01A00517 (EEOC OFO 2000).
- "Time spent commuting to and from home should not be included in official time computations because all employees are required to commute to and from their federal employment on their own time." EEOC MD-110, Chapter 6.

Remedies

- The agency improperly denied the complainant official time to work on his breach of settlement claim. Accordingly, the EEOC directed the agency to provide him two hours of administrative leave. Mahon v. U.S. Postal Service, 111 LRP 66231, EEOC No. 0120100142 (EEOC OFO 2011).
- The agency improperly denied the complainant official time to fill out a form to request EEO counseling. Accordingly, the EEOC directed the agency to credit the complainant with the 1.5 hours of time she spent off the clock filling out the form. Shepherd v. U.S. Postal Service, 98 FEOR 3049, EEOC No. 05960547 (EEOC 1997).
- The appropriate remedy for an improper denial of official leave depends on the circumstances of the case. "If appellant used annual leave to represent the complainants, then the agency shall restore the leave to him." Harrell v. U.S. Postal Service, 95 FEOR 321, EEOC No. 01942166 (EEOC 1995).
- "If appellant prepared for the cases on his own time, the agency shall provide him with official time to be used as he deems suitable. As to when and how appellant should be allowed to utilize the official time due him, the Commission notes that reasonableness should be the guide, and that the parties should jointly determine when and under what circumstances the time shall be used." Harrell v. U.S. Postal Service, 95 FEOR 3213, EEOC No. 01942166 (EEOC 1995).
- "[I]f appellant was required to take leave without pay in order to prepare the cases, then the agency shall reimburse him with back pay and any appurtenant benefits." Harrell v. U.S. Postal Service, 95 FEOR 3213, EEOC No. 01942166 (EEOC 1995).
- The agency was ordered to restore four hours of annual leave to the complainant after the EEOC determined it improperly required the complainant to take the leave to prepare for a hearing when instead he should have been granted official time. Brown v. U.S. Postal Service, 95 FEOR 3123, EEOC No. 04940004 (EEOC 1995).

Limiting official time based on system abuse

- In dismissing all 99 of the complainant's appeals, the EEOC stated that he had little credibility before the EEOC, and that the agency can severely limit what official time, if any, he is allowed to pursue complaints that abuse the system. Kessinger v. U.S. Postal Service, 99 FEOR 3265, EEOC No. 01976399 (EEOC 1999).

Standing to raise official time claims

- The EEOC found that an EEOC administrative judge erred in finding that the agency improperly limited the complainant's time for representational activities and denied him reimbursement for expenses related to his representation of others in EEO complaints. The right to challenge a denial of official time lies with the complainant, not the representative. Kessinger v. U.S. Postal Service, 110 LRP 10487, EEOC No. 0120081578 (EEOC OFO 2010).

- The agency properly dismissed the complainant's case because he had no standing to claim that he was improperly denied official time while serving as the representative of another employee. Szluzer v. U.S. Postal Service, 107 LRP 35018, EEOC No. 0120064782 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- The complainant's claim that he was unlawfully denied official time in connection with representing another individual in an EEO complaint was properly dismissed for failure to state a claim. The denial of official time for a representative can only be challenged by the complainant, not the representative. Campana v. Social Security Administration, 107 LRP 13182, EEOC No. 0120070204 (EEOC OFO 2007).
- The agency was advised that only the complainants, not representatives, have standing to raise EEO official time claims. Lambert v. Social Security Administration, 100 FEOR 3107, EEOC No. 05990820 (EEOC 1999).

Reprisal

- The EEOC found that a memorandum issued to the complainant, a radiologist, by the chief of radiology constituted per se reprisal because it had a chilling effect on his participation in the EEO process. The memo directly referenced the complainant's request for and grant of official time to work on his EEO complaint and advised him that he needed to improve his conduct by following instructions regarding the official time granted. In the same memorandum, the chief also criticized the complainant's professionalism and warned him that if he failed to act professionally, disciplinary action could be taken. Darrin H. v. Department of Veterans Affairs, 123 LRP 31334, EEOC No. 2022001862 (EEOC OFO 2023).
- The EEOC affirmed an AJ's default judgment against the Department of Defense, but modified the AJ's decision, finding in part that the complainant raised an inference of retaliatory animus when he alleged that an agency official told him to submit a leave request to attend an appointment with an EEO specialist, calling it "personal business" and threatening him with AWOL if he visited the EEO specialist without requesting leave first. The EEO specialist had to explain to the official that it was unnecessary for the complainant to use his personal leave to come to the EEO office, since it "falls under official time." Coleman H. v. Department of the Army, 124 LRP 12624, EEOC No. 2023001066 (EEOC OFO 2024).

Other Resources

- EEOC Management Directive 110, Chapter 6: Development of Impartial and Appropriate Factual Records
- Quick Start Guide: Representation
- For more guidance, see:
 - Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Chapter 09 -- Representatives and Official Time, Subchapter 05 -- Use of Official Time, Section A -- Official Time Complaints
 - Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Chapter 09 -- Representatives and Official Time, Subchapter 05 -- Use of Official Time, Section C -- Representatives and Official Time, Subsection 02 -- Official Time Complaints
 - Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Chapter 09 -- Representatives and Official Time, Subchapter 05 -- Use of Official Time, Section B -- Definition of Reasonable Time, Subsection 08 -- Official Time Requests and Denials
 - Hadley Guide to Federal Sector Equal Employment Law and Practice: Chapter 09 -- Representatives and Official Time, Subchapter 05 -- Use of Official Time, Section B -- Definition of Reasonable Time, Subsection 07 -- Official Time Policies

Please share your experience and expertise. Forward any suggested additions or changes to this or other Quick Start Guides to QSGeditor@lrp.com.

© LRP Publications. All Rights Reserved.