

I can't wait to see you all again. I will keep trying to call whenever a chance presents itself.

Love

Justin

→ you should be receiving some letters by now.

I saw the bustling, gungy busy Baghdad streets change to rural countryside as we passed under the over-bridging the city limit. I visited other headquarters on the way back to Charlie Med - at each stop trying to find a working phone - but no avail. When we got back to the Charlie Med, I was surprised to find a large complex of air conditioned tents, filled with female soldiers and clutter news papers. Damn - it was like a shock.
The air inside the hospital tents was clearer than they had floor pieces to prevent the sand from getting in, and all the doors zipped down flush with the floor tiles. It felt great being there.
68°, clear, comfortable.

I only stayed for 30 minutes before I was ready to head back. Our TOC was about 50 km towards the front, and on the way we would have to stop at the BEA (Battle Brigade Support Area) to pick up bulk medicine resupply. We got there around dusk when we noticed that the 2 1/2 ton truck we had taken with us had transmission failure and